

CybAero unveils new product line

First North-listed CybAero is set to unveil a new product line on March 31. The product line is based on over 20 years of experience as well as extensive new development and refinement of the company's earlier product, the APID 60.

This new product line gives CybAero even greater customization capabilities for defense clients and users on the civilian and commercial markets.

"We are seeing a rapid increase in demand in several different areas of application. As a result, we have developed a new product line based on the expertise and experience we have accumulated over the years. We have made extensive investments in new development and refinement, especially over the past two years, and this boosts our competitiveness, allowing us to meet the growing demand of the world market," says Mikael Hult, CEO of CybAero.
