Sweco acquires BML Ingenieure GmbH and strengthens its Building division's offering

Sweco has signed an agreement to acquire BML Ingenieure GmbH, a German engineering company operating in the Frankfurt area. With the acquisition, Sweco will have one of the largest building teams in the Rhein-Main area.

"The acquisition will strengthen our position in the Frankfurt region and bring strong competence in a market with high growth. We look forward to joining our businesses and working together to create value for our customers," says Tomas Carlsson, President and CEO of Sweco.

BML has strong competence in engineering and planning within building services and district heating. The acquisition will strengthen Sweco's position as the leading architecture and engineering consultancy in Europe.

"We are happy to welcome BML, and its employees, to Sweco. Customers are increasingly asking for general planning services from one single partner. The acquisition of BML means that we will be able to provide market leading services in this area. We look forward to developing the company together and providing our customers with extensive expertise," says Ina Brandes, President of Sweco Central Europe.

BML has 21 employees and will become a department within the Sweco division Planning & Design.
