Alienware and Tobii Continue to Bring Eye Tracking to Gamers with the Launch of the 2018 Alienware 17 Gaming Laptop

At the game show PAX East, Alienware announced their updated 17-inch gaming laptop with cutting edge hardware and software. The 2018 Alienware 17 will retain industry-leading features, including integrated Tobii eye tracking technology, while refreshing other components to increase system performance and improve user experience.

“Alienware is known for innovation and for adding the most advanced technologies and capabilities to its gaming notebook and desktop products,” said Oscar Werner, President of Tobii Tech. “Today we are thrilled to confirm that Alienware remains committed to providing its customers with the latest technology-- including Tobii eye tracking hardware and software.”

Tobii and Alienware lead the way introducing eye tracking for the award-winning Alienware 17 gaming laptop in late 2016. Today, over 100 gaming titles include eye-tracking support, including many top-tier titles like Ubisoft's latest smash hit Far Cry 5. Recently, the companies have collaborated closely to bring the benefits of eye tracking to a wide range of gamers, pro teams, and esports audiences.

In January 2018, the finals of the ELeague Major for CS:GO broke the record for the most concurrent viewers of a single Twitch stream with over 1,130,000 viewers. During the stream, ELeague used technology from Alienware and Tobii to give viewers insight into the minds of professional gamers, showing incredible reaction times and top-level tactics. In March of 2018, leading professional esports organization Team Liquid shared that they have added Tobii eye tracking hardware and software to their new Alienware Training Facility, upping the standards for esports training.

“At Alienware we are focused on bringing our customers the most sophisticated capabilities and technologies available to make sure they can compete at the highest levels,” said Christopher Sutphen, global marketing director at Alienware. “We are pleased to continue our work with Tobii, the world’s leader in eye tracking technology, to bring the powerful advantage of eye tracking to our community and to create a world-class gaming experience.”
