

Akelius Residential Property AB (publ)

Akelius acquires 258 apartments in Boston

The properties were acquired in two separate transactions. One of the properties is located in Cambridge in the immediate proximity to the Harvard University. The property was constructed in 1964. The other four properties were built around 1920 and are located in Somerville and Brighton. The price is USD 92 million.

Pål Ahlsén: MIT and Harvard are two of the best universities in the world. They contribute to the population growth of Boston, which, together with good locations, is the best insurance against vacancy.
