Jhoombox Launches Official Kickstarter Campaign Today

Washington D.C. Developers Turn to Crowdfunding Site to Launch Next Generation of Android-based Smart TV

(Washington,DC)–Jhoombox, recently nominated as one of of Tech Cocktail's Hottest Showcasing Startups, has officially launched their Kickstarter crowdfunding campaign today. The Android based "Smart TV" console has a Pandora-like interface with millions of karaoke songs available through the Amazon hosted cloud.

The creative entertainment content generator allows users to stream movies on Netflix, surf the web, Skype and play games. Jhoombox users can also record or film karaoke sessions for easy upload to major social networks like YouTube and Facebook. The console comes bundled with one microphone and one 2.4G wireless keyboard and air mouse controller.

Jhoombox CEO Rashid Moin explains, "We are amplifying the karaoke system for friends and family to create and share their favorite songs, while also allowing users to collaborate online, in real time, with other passionate Jhoombox users." Moin, recipient of CEA's Innovator Award, continues, "Our Android-based console is at the forefront of the next generation 'Smart TV' movement."

Selected to showcase at the Consumer Electronics Show in Las Vegas this year, Jhoombox has been beta tested with fifty consoles, has acquired FCC approval to be sold in the United States and is currently patent pending.
