

Spray Foam Coalition Insulates Home on Designing Spaces™ on Lifetime TV

Allyson Wilson from Spray Foam Coalition joins “Think Green” series

(Pompano Beach, FL – CISION – April 24, 2013) Spray Polyurethane Foam from American Chemistry Council’s Spray Foam Coalition will be featured on the popular home improvement show Designing Spaces™ on Lifetime TV on Friday, April 26th at 7:30 am (ET/PT). The segment, “An Education on Insulation for Today’s Homeowner” will air as part of the “Think Green” series.

Allyson Wilson from American Chemistry Council’s Spray Foam Coalition pays homeowners Andy and Anitra a visit and shows them how using open cell insulation will keep their home properly insulated and increase energy efficiency. In addition to insulating a home, spray foam can reduce a home’s noise transmission and can add extra strength to a home’s infrastructure when applied in those areas.

Wilson demonstrates how spray Polyurethane foam is installed, and explains the benefits of insulating a home with spray foam as well as what spray foam can do for a house in the long run.

“We’re so excited to have American Chemistry Council’s Spray Foam Coalition on our “Think Green” series to show our Designing Spaces viewers a great solution to save money and energy while living comfortably in their homes for less,” says Lysa Liemer, Designing Spaces™ on Lifetime Executive VP of Programming and Chief Operating Officer.
