Brookhouse, the leading gas training centre, supports Ravenheat boilers

Brookhouse Training based near Bradford, Yorkshire - the UK's leading gas, plumbing, electrical, training and assessment specialists - has demonstrated its support for boiler manufacturer, Ravenheat, by equipping its state-of-the-art training facilities with a range of Ravenheat and White Heat branded boilers.

Providing the latest Managed Learning Programme in gas through its purpose-built training centre, Brookhouse offers would-be installers practical learning through hands-on training. Supporting this, the centre has installed working models from Ravenheat's current line-up, including both system and combi models.

James McConnell, Director at Brookhouse explains: "Brookhouse is one of the leading training centres in the UK, offering gas courses that have been designed, tried and tested by our industry experienced trainers, but also with our customers in mind. Hence, it makes sense to support our learning programmes with the very best that technology has to offer.

"Ravenheat boilers not only come complete with the company's tried and trusted technologies, they fly the flag for energy efficiency, and together with their superior solid brass components, they are perfect for hands on repeat training for both novice and experienced installers," adds James.

Our new White Heat range in particular represents the next generation of affordable high efficiency combination and system boilers, and trainee installers are able to appreciate at first hand the quality training and the reliability for which the Ravenheat brand is recognised.”

Brookhouse Training is renowned for introducing trainee gas engineers to real world working environments through practical training and guaranteed work placements in industry.
