Tuesday 25 November: Christmas has come early for Elbow fans who will have the chance to snap up an incredible gift after the band donated a much-loved guitar to a Manchester-based landmine charity.

Signed by all five members of the band, the Godin Montreal guitar has been used in their live show for the past eight years. The star item is being auctioned on eBay along with lots from Mercury-nominated GoGo Penguin, The Prodigy, Lenny Kravitz and Stephen Fry in aid of MAG (Mines Advisory Group).

Proceeds from the 'Music Beats Mines' auction will go to fund MAG's lifesaving work across the world to clear war zones of landmines and weapons, helping men, women and children gain access to food, water and aid.

Long-time supporters of the Manchester-based charity, Elbow used MAG's logo on their 2014 chart-topping album The Take Off and Landing of Everything, and have lent their track 'Colour Fields' to a MAG video, first aired at Glastonbury this year.

Frontman Guy Garvey is encouraging people to grab some one-off music memorabilia in time for Christmas, whilst supporting a charity close to his heart.

He says, ““We’ve been huge admirers of the work MAG do for over a decade now. They risk their lives to piece back together war-torn communities. Supporting MAG means that we get to feel like heroes without leaving the safety and comfort of our armchairs.

“All you have to do to be one of those heroes is bid in their auction. So go on... support MAG this Christmas, and be a hero.”

Some of the music world's biggest names have donated signed CDs, posters and other one-of-a-kind musical merchandise to MAG for its Music Beats Mines online auction, kicking off this week.
