Net Gaming make changes of its management team

Chief Legal Officer, John Cremona is now part of Net Gaming's management team, as part of the fact that more markets seem to go for re-regulations, where the United States of America will play an important role in the future.

New opportunities to market Sports Betting in the United States of America opened up. Net Gaming considers this as much positive and expects more states in the United States of America to legalize online gambling. As a natural step, Chief Legal Officer John Cremona, 46, also joins the management group from today to support the Company's future needs in the areas of regulatory compliance and continuing development. John is a Doctor of Law, University of Malta, and has worked at Highlight Media since 2012. Prior to joining Highlight Media, he was Senior Associate at Emmanuel Mallia & Associates for 12 years. At the same time, Net Gaming's COO Sirp De Wit has decided to leave the Company for new challenges.

"I look forward to working even more closely with John Cremona in our management group and I am certain that his knowledge will play a crucial role in the Company's continuing development. The US market will be an important market for us where we see great opportunities for strong growth. I would also like to thank Sirp De Wit for his time with the Company and I wish him the best of luck in his future assignments," comments Marcus Teilman, CEO of Net Gaming.
