EQL Pharma recruits Oskar Karmlid as new Chief Supply Chain Officer (CSCO)

EQL has recruited Oskar Karmlid as its new Chief Supply Chain Officer (CSCO). Oskar will join the team in October 2026 and take over from Martin Kristofferson, who currently leads supply chain on interim basis.

Oskar has spent most of his professional career in consulting, focusing on supply chain and operations. Throughout his career, he has worked with building and developing end-to-end supply chains, improving planning and cross-functional ways of working, driving supplier and logistics set-ups, creating more efficient and scalable processes, and coaching clients throughout these projects and processes. Prior to his consulting career, Oskar spent three years at SOVA, in various supply chain and logistics roles.

CEO Axel Schörling comments

"To me, the recruitment of Oskar completes the upgrade of EQL's management team, with the clear target to prepare the company for its next growth phase. We are currently experiencing challenges across our supply chain which need to be addressed structurally, focusing on upgrading and enhancing internal processes and systems. Oskar's deep knowledge within supply chain, coupled with his analytical can-do attitude, will be instrumental assets for EQL, in its ambitions to create robust and scalable foundation."

Oskar comments:

"I'm very glad and enthusiastic about joining EQL Pharma. This role gives me the chance to work both strategically and hands-on, bringing together the knowledge and experience I've built over years in consulting with the opportunity to be closer to execution and drive real, lasting impact. I look forward to rolling up my sleeves and contributing to building an efficient, end-to-end, future-proof supply chain – one that supports and accelerates EQL's strategy and growth journey. I'm excited to work closely with the team and to be part of shaping this exciting development ahead."
