CybAero has received additional payment - trading in the stock is expected to be resumed after the shareholders meeting on April 26

CybAero has received an additional SEK 1 million attributable to the financing agreement previously concluded with Alpha Blue Ocean. Nasdaq has announced that trading in CybAeros shares may be resumed as soon as the CybAero shareholders meeting concludes on the new financing and no other circumstances arise which lead to a new position.

CybAero has received another bridge loan of SEK 1 million. The loan is part of the financing solution CybAero and the European High Growth Opportunities Securitization Fund, with the advisor Alpha Blue Ocean Advisors Ltd, a part of the Alpha Blue Ocean Investment Group, entered into March 28 this year. The financing solution enables a possible investment in CybAero of up to SEK 52.5 million in the form of thirteen convertible loans. (For further information refer to press release as of March 28).

Nasdaq has informed CybAero that, taking into account the current circumstances, they intend to resume trading in the company's shares after the shareholders meeting on April 26, provided that the Company publishes a communique from the shareholders meeting stating that the meeting affirms the issuing of the convertibles and warrants in accordance with the aforementioned published information. However, Nasdaq maintains that a new assessment will be made at that time as changes in circumstances may lead to a new position.
