Dynavox Group adjusts previously disclosed alternative performance measures

Dynavox Group AB (publ) has identified that exchange rates were not applied consistently between the current and comparative periods when calculating the foreign exchange effects used to determine currency-adjusted growth and currency-adjusted organic growth. As a result, previously disclosed currency-adjusted growth and organic growth for the periods from Q1 2025 through Q3 2026 have been recalculated using a consistent methodology. The adjustment affects only alternative performance measures (APMs) and does not affect any figures reported in the Group's IFRS financial statements. The company's financial targets also remain unchanged.

The inconsistency was identified during a detailed review of the underlying calculations. Exchange rates used for the current period and for the comparative period were not applied on the same basis, which meant that revenue growth was not consistently presented on a comparable basis. As a result, the foreign exchange impact, and in turn the reported currency-adjusted growth and organic growth figures, differed from what a consistent application would have shown.

Dynavox Group has recalculated the affected growth figures for the period from the first quarter of 2025 through the third quarter of 2026, applying the same exchange rates to the current and comparative periods. The adjustment relates solely to the calculation of growth measures and does not affect the underlying financial results. Currency-adjusted growth and organic growth are alternative performance measures (APMs) and are not part of the IFRS financial statements. The adjusted figures will be applied in future financial reports, including the comparative figures.

The adjustment does not change Dynavox Group's financial targets. The revenue growth target remains unchanged with an average annual currency-adjusted growth of 20%, including acquisitions. The EBIT margin target of reaching and exceeding 15% also remains unchanged.

Dynavox Group has discussed the calculation methodology with its external auditors and recalculated the affected figures. The company has also strengthened the review and controls surrounding the calculation to ensure consistent application going forward.
