period's net sales was negative EUR 1,866 thousand. At comparable exchange rates, net sales increased by 65.7 percent.

Qt's operating profit (EBITA) in the second quarter was EUR 11,417 thousand (EUR 3,721 thousand). Qt's operating profit (EBIT) in the second quarter was EUR 10,634 thousand (EUR 3,620 thousand). The Group had 455 employees at the end of the first half of 2021, compared to 351 a year earlier. The increase in the number of employees has been strongest in the sales and research and development organization on top of the acquisition of froglogic.

The Group's financial position is very good.

Juha Varelius, President and CEO:

Qt Group's second quarter could even be characterized as exceptionally strong. Growth was accelerated particularly by the very strong sales of developer licenses in all of the company's geographical operating regions and a significant multi-year license deal closed with a large international software company in North America in April. Net sales of approximately EUR 6 million were recognized on the deal in the second quarter. The company has also been able to continue to systematically increase the average value of the deals it has closed. The sales of distribution licenses also continued to develop favorably in the second quarter. The depreciation of the US dollar had a negative effect on the growth of net sales. About two-thirds of Qt's sales are USD-based.

In the review period, we have successfully continued transition to the subscription invoicing model in the new developer license sales. In this model, the customer pays a fixed annual fee for the right to use the software and customer support. The amount of maintenance is smaller for the developer license that is based on the subscription invoicing model, and the revenue is recognized mainly on the time of license release, while the maintenance revenue recognized over the license contract period decreases. This change increases the license revenue and correspondingly decreases the maintenance revenue that the company reports. In line with our growth strategy, we have continued to have a strong focus on the recruitment of sales, consulting and product development personnel. Thanks to the growth of net sales, the company's business was highly profitable. The operating result was EUR 10,634 thousand and the operating profit margin was 31.3 percent in spite of the growth investments made during the period.

On April 13, 2021, we announced we had acquired the entire share capital of the Germany-based company froglogic GmbH for EUR 30 million. The acquisition brings froglogic's test automation tools into the Qt product portfolio to provide customers with a more comprehensive product range that encompasses the entire software development process. At the same time, the acquisition makes it possible for Qt's global sales network to be used as a distribution channel for froglogic's products. The integration of froglogic's operations into Qt and the Qt offering has progressed according to plan, and there are already clear signs of the improved efficiency and development of the acquired business as part of Qt. We believe that, going forward, we can continue to grow and develop the acquired business into a significant element of Qt's entire offering and business. The COVID-19 pandemic continues to have a negative impact on many of our customers. There are challenges in the market with regard to the availability of electronic components. If prolonged, this situation may lead to reductions in the production capacity of our customers and delays in deliveries. Restrictions on movement have also slowed down the progress of our consulting projects, especially in Asia.

Future Outlook

Operating environment and market outlook

The company estimates the growth prospects for its business in the next few years as very promising. The Group's business development efforts will focus on desktop applications as well as embedded systems in the automotive industry, consumer electronics, medical devices, and industrial automation sectors. Product development efforts will also focus on the value-added features and tools needed in the creation of embedded systems. Sales growth associated with embedded systems will also reflect on the earnings logic. Volume-based distribution license revenue from these sales accumulates over the long term. Accordingly, it is typical of Qt as a company that quarterly net sales and growth may vary significantly between quarters. In addition to organic growth, the company also pursues growth opportunities through acquisitions that support its strategy. The froglogic GmbH acquisition announced in April is a good example of this.

The COVID-19 pandemic continues to cause increased uncertainty for the company's short-term outlook. As vaccinations progress, the pandemic is being gradually brought under control in many of the company's main markets and society is starting to reopen and return to normal. The pandemic has created pent-up demand for many products, which is now becoming released, accelerated by unprecedented stimulus measures. However, the global shortage of components has emerged as a factor that slows down growth. This shortage is likely to affect at least some of the company's customers in the form of delayed projects and lower production volumes, which would continue to slow down the company's accrual of net sales from distribution licenses. It is obvious that recovery from the pandemic will be uneven between different industries and geographical regions and the recovery may be a long process.

In the stock exchange release published on 29 July 2021, we raised the full-year net sales outlook for 2021 and estimated that it would increase by 35–45 percent year-on-year at comparable exchange rates. After re-assessing the outlook for the rest of the year, we raise our net sales outlook again and estimate that the full-year net sales for 2021 will increase by 40–50 percent year-on-year at comparable exchange rates and our operating profit margin will be at least 15 percent.

Events after the review period

The company had no other significant events deviating from normal business operations after the end of the review period.

Risks and uncertainties

The company's short-term risks and uncertainties are related to potential significant changes in the company's business operations as well as the retention and recruitment of the personnel required for business development. Furthermore, the prolongation of the coronavirus epidemic may slow down the growth of the business and affect the valuation of assets. The epidemic has not affected the valuation of assets thus far.

Exchange rate fluctuations, particularly between the US dollar and euro, may have a large impact on the development of the company's net sales. Another factor contributing to considerable fluctuation in quarterly net sales and profitability in particular is the contract turnaround times which, in the major customer segment, are very long at up to 18 months.

The company's business risks and preparations for them are also described on the company website at www.qt.io.
