

TalkPool and Sigma sign global framework agreement within IoT

TalkPool AB and Sigma Technology Solutions AB have signed a framework agreement for the supply of competence resources to ensure the development of future Internet of Things (IoT) solutions. The agreement involves a long-term partnership where Sigma Technology delivers professional expertise in software development and technical information; both consultants on-site and near-shore operations.

TalkPool works with advanced technologies and has created a unique leading position in the Low Power Wide Area Technologies (LPWA). This requires credible and stable partners. Sigma Technology is a reliable supplier of technology and software development, with a strong focus on the needs of their customers and high delivery quality.

"The new radio technology, optimized for long range and low power consumption, allows for more units to be connected than what was up until now economically viable or even possible. For example, smart homes, containers of various types, pallets and parking lots. It will be fascinating to see what new and exciting areas we will develop that improves our society and gives companies even better offerings", says Robert Spertina, Head of IoT.

Earlier this year, Tele2 and TalkPool entered into a partnership with the goal of building an IoT network based on LoRaWAN Technology in Gothenburg. This will enable many exciting customer projects in the Gothenburg region.

"We are very happy and proud for the opportunity to help TalkPool with the development of the IoT solutions of tomorrow. For 30 years, Sigma has built a strong competence in software development and in recent years we have focused a lot on strengthening our expertise within IoT. Therefore, we look forward to cooperating with TalkPool and follow them in their ambitious goal to create innovative IoT services." said Robert Åberg, Head of IoT Solutions at Sigma Technology.
