EDS unveil new website under Silverdell brand

The world leader in delivering highly complex decommissioning projects in live hazardous, demanding and sensitive environments, today launch a new website to serve worldwide major industrial sectors.

EDS, the collaborative one-stop shop for end-to-end turnkey decommissioning solutions – including process plant asset recovery, dismantling, demolition, decontamination, industrial cleaning and waste management, and land remediation; announce the launch of their industrial services website at www.edsdecom.com

The new site captures the company's global reach, scale, skills, resources, approach and expertise that deliver even the most complex projects safely, on programme and on budget. EDS' decommissioning capabilities have exclusively earned them the Queen's Award for Enterprise.

To Protect Life

Providing decommissioning with a difference, EDS work with customers across the major industrial sectors worldwide - oil and gas, petrochemical, chemical, pharmaceutical, nuclear and conventional power generation, brewing and distilling, specialist manufacturing, and mineral extraction and processing - including many of the largest listed multinational companies.

Darren Palin, Managing Director, EDS said:

“Our new website is aimed at organisations concerned with maximising the residual value of their plant and property assets; protecting people - their employees and those in the wider community; and ensure minimal enduring environmental impact from their activities.”

He went on to say:

“Our concern for their interests, unsurpassed experience and professional, collaborative approach generate the confidence and trust that build long-term worldwide relationships. The website will offer thought-leading advice and information across our core sectors and specialisms.”

ENDS.
