

Crunchfish launches new website showcasing its five solution areas

For too long, humans have adapted to technology, when of course it should be the other way around. For example, why are we dependent on the net when we pay? Why is it hard to communicate with the proximity? And why are we still touching screens? Changing this requires radical innovation and cutting-edge technology. The tech company Crunchfish does not let the technology set the limits, but rather adapts it to suit us humans. The new website clarifies these solutions.

With a rare combination of courage and technical know-how, Crunchfish addresses the challenges of today in several areas - Digital Cash, Blippit, Food Waste, Nearby and Gestures. The solution areas are clarified under separate tabs on the company's new website, which is launched today.

With 38 innovations, of which 29 have already been granted patents, we never let technology dictate the conditions, but always adapt it to what suits humans best. Welcome to visit us at crunchfish.com.
