KempPi Robotic Welding Application Center opens in India

KempPi opens up a robotic welding application center in Pune, India to respond to the increasing needs for welding automation. The center provides complete and innovative solutions and services to the integrators and end customers. KempPi's experienced welding engineers help the customers to optimize their welding applications, and offer comprehensive training covering all aspects of welding.

"The robotic welding application center helps to speed up our growth in Asia, which is one of KempPi's strategic target areas. KempPi India Private Ltd. started its operations in Chennai in 2011, and the new application center is a natural next step in the market where the accelerating automation increases the popularity of robotic welding", says Ville Vuori, CEO, KempPi Oy. "The center gives insight to increase customer understanding and helps in serving the important markets in India even better. Local expertise is a key business factor for KempPi", he continues.

The Pune center is equipped with KempPi's state-of-the-art A7 MIG Welder and KempArc robotic welding systems integrated with robots from well-known robot manufacturers. The systems are presented in action to demonstrate the efficiency and quality that can be reached with KempPi's Wise optimized welding processes. The visitors can also try the A7 MIG Welder's unique web browser-based interface in practice and experience its ease of use and how much it saves time in system setup.

The robotic welding application center is located at KempPi India's new subsidiary facilities in Pune. A similar center was opened in Beijing, China in December 2017.
