ÅF strengthens position as leading defence technology partner

ÅF has signed a major contract with the Swedish Defence Materiel Administration (FMV) to provide consultancy services relating to production of necessary documentation and coordination of construction work for property networks and technical surveillance of Swedish Armed Forces garrisons around Sweden. The contract is for four years, including extensions, and has an estimated order value of SEK 61 million. Including extensions, the order value is projected to rise to SEK 123 million over the course of the contract. ÅF will provide leading-edge know-how and project planning – from needs analysis and system descriptions to construction management and systems security. ÅF will work alongside Helm Systems AB as a contract partner.

Viktor Svensson, President of ÅF's Technology Division, said: "This contract will enable ÅF over the course of four years to be part of helping and developing one of our key clients in this industry."

ÅF is a leader in technologically complex systems for the defence industry. The FMV contract enhances the company's ability to grow its market share in both the defence and telecom industries.

Pär Lundberg, Business Area Manager ÅF Systems Management, said: "We are delighted that ÅF and FMV will be able to continue to successfully spearhead development and services within the Swedish armed forces, which in the current international climate are increasingly important for Sweden."
