Camanio Care recruits super talent

On the 23rd April, Victoria Wang starts working as Chief Operating Officer at Camanio Care. Victoria most recently comes from a position as Senior Manager at EY Corporate Finance and has once been identified as a super talent by the Swedish publication Veckans Affärer.

Camanio Care is happy about the recruitment of Victoria Wang to the position as Chief Operating Officer (COO). Her experience will contribute greatly to the continuing work developing the company's growth journey, both internally and externally.

– We are proud to welcome Victoria Wang to the group and to our management team at Camanio Care. Her experience and drive will contribute positively to the company and we are convinced she will take us even further in our work with, among other things, strategical partners and projects of cooperation, says Catharina Borgenstierna, CEO of Camanio Care.

Victoria Wang has a master's degree in bio medicine from Karolinska Institutet (KI) as well as a master's degree of business leadership from the Stockholm School of Economics. The last few years she's been working at EY, as advisor in M&A within the technology and media sectors, and with business development with special focus on China.

– I look forward to taking on the challenges at Camanio Care. It is a very exciting company, acting in a sector which is important for the future, and I am really excited to contribute to the continuing growth and expansion of the company. In addition to the Swedish market there are big opportunities for partnerships in Asia, with an aging population and an already large presence of technology in care. The company's products, services and solutions, combined with the demographic development in the world, gives the perfect pre-requisites for Camanio Care to continue growing and be leading within its segment, says Victoria Wang.
