

Scout Gaming signs agreement with Expressen

Scout Gaming has entered into an agreement with Expressen regarding deliverance of the company's gaming platform. Expressen will gain access to a number of sports and is expected to launch during 2019.

The agreement stipulates that Scout Gaming will provide platforms to Expressen for a number of sports. Expressen, which is part of Bonnier News, is one of the largest media houses on the Swedish market.

"That Expressen, which is one of the leading media houses in Sweden, chooses to offer Fantasy Sports to its readers through our platform indicates that interest for Fantasy Sports in Sweden is increasing. The fact that we are chosen as the preferred supplier confirms our ambition to be the leading supplier within the area ", comments Scout Gaming's CEO, Andreas Ternstrom.

"Sport has always been one of Expressen's most important areas, with a large and loyal audience. The Fantasy Sports platform we now receive from Scout Gaming allows us to expand our offering within our subscription service Expressen Premium for all sports-interested readers who so far signed up for a subscription," comments Dan Edstrom, commercial manager of Expressen Premium.
