

Risk Intelligence A/S signs a new deal with Hamburg based technical cargo ship management company for the Risk Intelligence System

Risk Intelligence A/S (“Risk Intelligence” or “the Company”) signs a new deal with Hamburg based technical cargo ship management company (“the Client”) for the Risk Intelligence System and intelligence reports

The Risk Intelligence System is now available to the operations department and the security team at a Hamburg based technical ship management company. The Client is focused on the technical management of smaller feeder cargo vessels which may change routes on a regular basis – as such the access to near real-time intelligence is key for their operations.

The Client has also signed up to several intelligence reports which will be used to assess new commercial opportunities and aid management decisions. The Risk Intelligence Advisory Services, the Company’s consulting arm, will be on hand to support these decisions with bespoke security advice for new vessels and destinations - Advisory Services cover both vessel and port security issues dependent on the Client’s needs. At a time when security personnel are stretched this allows clients to outsource time consuming duties such as port security surveys.

Jim Pascoe, CCO of Risk Intelligence says:

“Overall, it was the quality and depth of analysis on the Risk Intelligence System which impressed the Client, not only is the System intuitive and easy to use but it is backed up by our Duty Watch Team who can respond to queries 24/7. We have always had a strong relationship with our clients in Hamburg and with the addition of yet another German company to the Risk Intelligence client base we see this continuing for the long term.”
