OPRA™ Bone anchored prosthesis now available at Johns Hopkins

Integrum, a leading provider of innovative solutions for bone anchored prosthetics, has today announced a contract with Johns Hopkins Hospital to offer an innovative surgical service to above-the-knee amputees in the U.S.

The prestigious Johns Hopkins Hospital has started an osseointegration based service lead by Orthopaedic Oncologist, Dr. Jonathan Forsberg, and Plastic Surgeon, Dr. Jamie Shores. The aim of the osseointegration program is to improve limb function and reducing pain and skin-related complications for patients in the United States and abroad.

Blake Pokress, Vice President of Integrum North America added, "We're delighted to be collaborating with the surgical team at Johns Hopkins. It's an exciting time for osseointegration in the United States and Johns Hopkins has positioned itself to be one of the leaders in the care of people affected by limb loss."
