

GWS launches a next-generation security platform

GWS Production in Sweden has launched a brand new Safeture 2.0. A new way to take control of employee safety.

It is now possible to view travel bookings and share positions and warnings with others, while getting real-time information about important events.

GWS is a global IT-company which works to help employees feel safe wherever they are. The company has developed Safeture, a safety platform and a risk management tool for companies and business travelers. Safeture is the new way to guarantee employee safety using state-of-the-art technology and it is already used globally by more than 1,000 major companies.

New Safeture 2.0 has been completely re-written from the ground with brand new design, numerous great improvements and new features. Safeture 2.0 adapts to the user's language, making it easy to choose countries you want to monitor by following event development through maps and local media. Much like before, the user will receive push and SMS alerts to avoid problems such as extreme weather conditions, natural disasters, traffic disruptions, political unrest and terrorist threats. Safeture 2.0 integrates two security tools: an app in the traveler's phone and a web portal for organization management, Instant Security Overview (ISO).

The latest version of Safeture uses state of art AI, Artificial Intelligence to enable swifter identification and communication of potential threats based on location or planned destination. It aggregates and filters information from thousands of different sources globally, including news media, government institutions, security and health information databases and social media. All the information is reviewed and compiled 24/7, by a team of experts to ensure accurate and timely alerts are pushed to the users.

"With Safeture 2.0 we take a big step forward and show that we are the leading security platform for business and business travelers." said Andreas Rodman, CEO of GWS.
