HENT signs contract worth approximately NOK 1bn

HENT, a leading Norwegian construction company focused on the construction of public and commercial real estate, has signed a contract for a large project in Oslo. HENT will build parts of new Livsvitenskapsbygget at Oslo University on commission for Statsbygg. The order value amounts to approximately NOK 1bn.

Statsbygg has commissioned HENT to build parts of future Livsvitenskapsbygget at Oslo University. The new faculty is a partnership project that covers about 66,700 square meters. The contract relates to the so-called partnership agreement and means that HENT, Statsbygg and other stakeholders will be included in the planning of the construction project.

“This is an important and demanding project that fits well based on our skills and capabilities. We are very proud and pleased that Statsbygg has chosen us as entrepreneurs for this particular project,” says Jan Jahren, CEO of HENT.

Ratos invested in HENT in 2013 with an ownership of 73%. HENT has approximately 870 employees and reported sales of NOK 7,034m and EBITA of NOK 253m in 2017.
