Ekoligens establishes operations at Catena's premises in Kungälv

Sustainable innovation company Ekoligens will be a new tenant at Catena's property in the Rollsbo industrial area in Kungälv.

The 8,000 square-metre property, Mutterstock 6, recently acquired by Catena, has gained a new tenant. A ten-year lease has been signed with Ekoligens, which manufactures items replacing plastics to an increasing extent, including cellulose clothes hangers. The company's production technology causes up to 12 times lower carbon dioxide emissions than producing plastics.

"It feels really great that Catena is able to join in and help an exciting and sustainable player like Ekoligens continue its journey of growth," says Johan Franzén, Regional Manager for Gothenburg at Catena.

"Our ambition is to create innovative products and materials that are both ecologically and economically sustainable. We are highly satisfied with Catena's flexible and solution-oriented approach and look forward to a long partnership," says Anders Nylander, CEO of Ekoligens.
