

Catena updates its commercial paper programme, including green commercial papers

The updated commercial paper programme from Catena now includes the possibility to incorporate green commercial papers.

The update, which means that Catena can now choose to designate commercial papers as green, is in line with Catena's sustainability work and demonstrates the company's ambition to deliver properties that are sustainable in the long term.

"Introducing possibilities for a wider range of green debt instruments to finance environmentally sustainable projects or assets is a logical progression for Catena. We are committed to long-term responsibility and incorporate sustainability into every facets of our business operations," says Catena's CFO, Magnus Thagg.

Green commercial papers issued under the commercial paper programme must comply with specific conditions set out in Catena's green framework, which is based on Green Bond Principles and has been reviewed by the independent climate and environmental research institute Cicero. Information on Catena's current listing documents for the commercial paper programme, the green framework, and evaluation from independent institutes is available on the company's website www.catena.se.
