Semcon signs a new global agreement with Atlas Copco

Technology company Semcon is continuing its long-term relationship with Atlas Copco by signing a new global framework agreement, making Semcon a Preferred Supplier. The agreement covers a wide range of expertise in research and development.

Atlas Copco was looking for a business partner to help develop its world-leading productivity solutions. Semcon was chosen as a supplier thanks to its vast expertise in R&D and as a result of the companies' long history together.

The new framework agreement covers more areas of expertise than before, allowing Semcon to take on more responsibility in future development projects.

"We welcome the prospect of further cooperation and more project responsibility. This means that we will be able to provide the benefit of our joint expertise and experience from various industries in the best way possible," says Olof Christensson, President of the Engineering Services Nordic business area at Semcon.
