Foxway strengthens its sustainability ambition with the appointment of Sara Lindstrand as new CSO

Foxway is delighted to welcome Sara Lindstrand as its new Chief Sustainability Officer (CSO). Sara joins Foxway from AFRY, where she currently serves as Head of Sustainability and has played a key role in shaping the company's strategic sustainability work.

"We are happy to welcome Sara to Foxway. Her blend of sustainability leadership and engineering expertise will help us further accelerate our circular tech agenda and strengthen our position as a European leader in circular tech solutions," says Patrick Höijer, CEO at Foxway.

With a strong track record in sustainability, innovation, and digitalisation, Sara brings both technical expertise and a strategic perspective to Foxway. Her experience spans from the integration of sustainability into business strategy and operations to enforcing firm governance around ESG.

Foxway also acknowledges her work in positioning both herself and previous employers as thought-leaders in this space and believes her people-centred leadership will be a strong contribution to the Group.

"I'm excited to join Foxway and contribute to advancing the circular tech journey. Foxway has a unique position in the market, and I look forward to working with the team to accelerate sustainable impact at scale, alongside profitable growth. Together, we can drive digitalisation in a way that empowers people and businesses while minimising environmental harm and ensuring technology remains a force for good," says Sara Lindstrand.

She will assume her role as Chief Sustainability Officer at Foxway on March 2nd, 2026.
