Dignitana announces a sales and marketing partnership with InfuSystem to provide scalp cooling systems in the United States

Scalp cooling innovator Dignitana AB announces today a sales and marketing partnership with InfuSystem Holdings, Inc., a leading health care service provider facilitating outpatient care for durable medical equipment manufacturers and health care providers in the United States.

As the preeminent provider of ambulatory infusion pumps and supplies to oncologists and other outpatient infusion centers, InfuSystem is uniquely suited to offer Dignitana's DigniCap Scalp Cooling System to its customers, enabling easy and efficient ordering and ongoing support to healthcare providers.

Catarina Löwenadler, Dignitana's Chief Executive Officer said, "InfuSystem has a stellar reputation for patient-focused product excellence and outstanding service and support, coupled with access to the majority of cancer centers in the US. This partnership is a significant step forward as Dignitana continues to accelerate growth in our most important market, and make scalp cooling available to as many patients as possible."

Carrie Lachance, President and COO of InfuSystem, said, "We are pleased to partner with Dignitana to provide our customers with access to DigniCap Scalp Cooling System, a premium solution for chemotherapy-induced alopecia. We look forward to a long and successful relationship."

The FDA-cleared DigniCap Scalp Cooling System is clinically proven to minimize hair loss from chemotherapy for cancer patients with solid tumors such as breast, ovarian and prostate cancer. DigniCap is available in over 260 infusion centers across the US and over 30 countries worldwide. Scalp cooling is a treatment recommendation in the clinical practice guidelines published by National Comprehensive Cancer Network® \(NCCN\), European Society for Medical Oncology \(ESMO\), and Cancer Australia.
