A watch instead of an egg

Made in Glashütte: NOMOS Glashütte has some colorful surprises for Easter—in keeping with the finest tradition.

GLASHÜTTE, EASTER 2023. Decorated eggs and three kisses have long been the Easter gift of choice in orthodox churches. Depending on the materials available, instead of a chicken's egg, these eggs are sometimes made of glass and precious stones and metals. Goldsmith, engraver, guillochéur or enameller—highly specialized professions that are barely known today—were the ones who once engaged in this art over the centuries. Famous to this day—some containing precious watches—are Fabergé eggs.

NOMOS, the manufacturer from the tradition-steeped German town famed for its fine mechanical watches, is now taking up this fine tradition: Watches in many colors, symbolic Easter eggs made in Glashütte, crafted in our own workshop in Glashütte. These watches could even be called Easter egg themselves: Hidden inside are exquisite, finely manufactured calibers with traditional Glashütte embellishments: rubies and tempered blue screws. With the watchmaker sending three virtual kisses with every watch.

About NOMOS Glashütte:

NOMOS Glashütte is one of the few owner-operated watch manufactories in the world, and creates its mechanical timepieces in Glashütte, Germany. Watch models such as the Tangente, Ludwig, Orion, Club or Metro are world-famous—just like the place where they are made. Glashütte is a legally protected designation of origin. Only manufacturers who work according to strict rules in the 175-year-old tradition of the watchmaking town are permitted to use this denomination for their wristwatches. NOMOS Glashütte is the manufacturer that produces the most mechanical watches in Glashütte.
