Volvo XC90 Named 2016 North American Truck of the Year

DETROIT, MI. (January 11, 2016) The Volvo XC90 has been named 2016 North American Truck of the Year.

Fifty-three automotive journalists from the United States and Canada voted for the luxury SUV for being a benchmark in its segment, based on factors including innovation, comfort, design, safety, handling, driver satisfaction and value for the dollar.

“Volvo Canada is thrilled the XC90 has been awarded with such a prestigious award,” said Marc Engelen, President and CEO of Volvo Cars of Canada, “The XC90 is a groundbreaking luxury SUV that is on the leading edge of technology and innovation. It offers the industry a glimpse at the bright future of Volvo Cars and has allowed us to stake our claim in the luxury segment once again.”

It is the second time the XC90 has won the North American Truck of the Year award. The first was in 2003, when the vehicle was originally introduced.

The Volvo XC90 features all new platform, powertrain and semi-autonomous driving technologies that set a new standard for the luxury SUV segment. All XC90s feature Volvo’s award-winning Sensus infotainment system, which centers on an intuitive, tablet-like touch screen that puts all of the vehicle’s systems and functions at the driver’s fingertips. Volvo City Safety, which includes Pedestrian Detection with Automatic Emergency Braking, automatically applies the brakes should a collision be imminent, is also standard. The available Pilot Assist semi-autonomous driving system will control vehicle speed and direction at speeds up to 40 km/h.

About the North American Car and Truck of the Year awards

The North American Car and Truck of the Year awards – now in their 23rd year – are unique in the United States because instead of being given by a single media outlet they are awarded by an independent group of automotive journalists from the United States and Canada who represent magazines, television, radio, newspapers and web sites.
