New Volvo V60's class-leading residual values will save drivers money when buying on personal lease

New Volvo V60's class-leading residual values will save drivers money when buying on personal lease

Volvo's new V60 mid-size premium estate has been awarded class-leading residual values, meaning customers purchasing the car on a lease deal will benefit from lower monthly costs.

Residual value experts cap hpi have estimated that the V60 D3 Momentum will be worth 45.3% of its cost new price after three years and 30,000 miles, putting it ahead of its German rivals. This spells good news for customers because strong residual values ultimately translate into lower monthly Personal Contract Purchase (PCP) and Personal Contract Hire (PCH) rates.

For those fleet user choosers who travel higher mileages on business, the V60 remains the sector leader, with the same model worth 38.3% of its cost new price after three years and 60,000 miles.

"Strong residual values are key to the successful launch of all new cars, and these figures make the new V60's personal leasing rates competitive from day one," explained Steve Beattie, Volvo Car UK's Head of Business Sales.

The new V60 shares styling cues with its bigger brother, the V90, and provides a class-leading 529 litres of boot space.

All V60 models come equipped with the Sensus infotainment system, which is fully compatible with Android Auto and Apple CarPlay, and powers a range of entertainment, satellite-navigation and connected services. This includes Volvo On Call, which connects drivers to their car from a smartphone or smartwatch, enabling them to start their car's engine remotely and setting the desired cabin temperature prior to getting behind the wheel.

The V60 is on sale now, with a starting price of £31,810.
