"We're proud to continue our journey together with Hitachi Energy in Landskrona. That this is our fourth major joint project underlines the strength of our collaboration. It also enables us to take advantage of Peab's expertise and resources across regional borders. Hitachi Energy's high demands on the work environment, quality and collaboration suit us well and contribute to the development of both the project and our shared working method," says Mani Mozaffari, Region Manager Peab.

"Landskrona is an important part of our continued growth in Sweden and our work to build the energy infrastructure of the future. It's a real plus to continue our collaboration with Peab that has already been an important partner in several of our expansion projects around the country. Now we look forward to seeing the project take shape and together build for the future," says Tobias Hansson, CEO of Hitachi Energy in Sweden.

The project is a turnkey contract. Work will start in September 2026 and is expected to be completed in March 2028.
