Redware announced as finalists in the UK IT Industry Awards

Redware, based in Leamington Spa, have been shortlisted for a UK IT Industry Award in the category 'UK Innovation and Entrepreneurship Award' for successful projects managed and delivered in the UK.

The BCS & Computing UK IT Industry Awards are a platform for the entire profession to celebrate best practice and excellence in the sector. David Clark MBE, Chief Executive Officer for BCS, The Chartered Institute for IT comments:

"As the Chartered Institute for IT I'd like to congratulate this year's finalists. They showcase not only the innovation and the professionalism of those working in IT, but also demonstrate the importance of IT in delivering business and social benefit."

The UK Innovation and Entrepreneurship category, which Redware are a finalist in, is a unique category recognising the importance of successful UK based projects and technological innovation. André Wigley, CEO at Redware comments:

"We are really happy to have been shortlisted as finalists, especially in the category we are in. Redware is proud of being a UK based IT company and we pride ourselves not only in our technological innovation, but in our desire to attract the best talent we can to work on developing our platforms.

Redware and the whole team have worked really hard to develop our latest generation of learning and mobile products, it's great to see their hard work being recognised."

ENDS.
