Kavli chooses Rejlers as its total provider of IT services

Kavli has chosen Rejlers as its total provider of IT services. The agreement covers a wide range of IT services for the entire Kavli Group and makes Rejlers an important partner in the process of realising Kavli's Industry 4.0 ambitions.

The agreement means that Rejlers delivers most of the company's IT services related to operations, storage and monitoring, including the infrastructure that powers Kavli's mission-critical business systems, as well as a number of other critical applications. Kavli's brands are well known and can be found on dining tables in many countries around the world. Production is based in numerous countries, and occurs 24 hours a day, 365 days a year.

"The accessibility demands imposed on our IT systems are enormous. A system freeze means that production stops, with immediate and costly consequences – for example, raw materials such as milk must be immediately destroyed. Therefore, we place very high demands on our IT systems and require our provider to be able to manage our 24/7 operations in several locations. Rejlers has really delivered in this regard," says Svein Solheim, ERP Manager at Kavli.

"We think this is a very exciting agreement where we really get to demonstrate our expertise and the breadth of our IT services, not least those that are part of our Hybrid Multi-Cloud concept. Our task is to ensure that the Kavli Group achieves its ambitions iIndustry 4.0 ambitions and remains one of the world's most efficient food producers," says Renè Eriksen, the Head of Industry at Rejlers in Norway.

Rejlers' Hybrid Multi-Cloud concept means that all of the customer's IT services are delivered from a dynamic capacity platform located in Rejlers' data centre. Customers get a cost-effective and proven PaaS delivery model that is fully scalable and can be combined with Azure and AWS services. All services come with full redundancy and the maximum level of built-in security.
