Rejlers awarded further contract in the development of Gävle Hospital

Rejlers has won a new contract for ByggPartner, where the end customer is Region Gävleborg in heating, sanitation and ventilation in connection with the extensive renovation and expansion of Gävle Hospital. Rejlers has previously participated in the design and will now continue to be trusted as the project moves forward in the construction phase. The assignment is part of Framtidsbygget, which will create modern healthcare facilities and better conditions for patients and healthcare staff.

The assignment includes phase 2 in heating and sanitation as well as air treatment in Building 29. Through the knowledge from the previous design phase, Rejlers contributes to continuity and coordination when the technical solutions are to be put into practice.

“We are proud of the continued confidence in a project that has great significance for the region's healthcare. We have participated in the development of the technical solutions and are now following them further into the construction phase. In a hospital environment, the technology must work every day, while at the same time being able to continue the care during the construction period. Here, our experience and the close cooperation between everyone involved becomes particularly valuable”, says Niclas Fridholm, Business Developer at Rejlers.

The renovation and expansion of Building 29 includes, among other things, new and modernised premises for the emergency department, medical emergency care and childbirth activities, as well as a new ambulance intake. The goal is to create more appropriate premises, improved patient flows and a healthcare environment that can meet both current and future needs.

The work is carried out at the same time as the care is in progress, which places high demands on planning and coordination to minimize the impact on the daily operations. Technical installations such as ventilation, heating and water supply are crucial for safe, healthy and well-functioning healthcare environments.

The Future Building is one of Region Gävle's largest property investments ever and a long-term investment in modernising healthcare premises.
