Crucial App Concepts Needs Help Helping Game Lovers Travel to Kha'Dari

A revolutionary multi-player PC game of space sabotage and domination.

Crucial App Concepts, a state-of-the-art app developer, has announced the launch of their crowdfunding campaign on IndieGogo.com. The team has been working on their latest multi-player PC game, Eclipse: Avalon's Gate, but needs help getting the project started.

The crowdfunding campaign went live May 16, 2014 and will continue through June 30, 2014. The team hopes to raise $20,000 to release the Beta edition of the game and fund development costs to bring the game to market.

Eclipse: Avalon's Gate features futuristic gameplay. Humans have landed on an exotic space island, Avalon, which holds treasures capable of changing the world. But, the treasures have guardians and players must find a way to get those treasures from the vicious Kha'Dari guards. The game features a story mode, customizable features for better gaming experience, and allows players to truly interact in the game.

"If you love traditional space games, you're going to love this one," states a Crucial App Concepts representative. "Building games of this magnitude requires a lot of funding, and to get our Beta testing going we are going to need a little help."

Pledges range from $15 up to $15,000. Developers have made it clear that they are willing to do whatever it takes to get more donations. They're offering a variety of robust rewards for pledging, from getting access to the Beta to artwork posters to even being part of the development process. As of May 29th, the team has raised $45 out of their $20,000 goal. With these funds, they will be able to finalize development so that the game can be released in a Beta edition for further real-life testing.
