Innovative task chair with superior movement and flexibility unveils at CDW

Boss Design continues to innovate in the office furniture sector with the launch of Coza, a new and innovative task chair that is being debuted at Clerkenwell Design Week. Created in collaboration with renowned German furniture designer, Martin Ballendat of Design Ballendat, Coza is a task chair that boasts extraordinary comfort and dynamic support by using the natural flexibility of a single ribbon of material. Unlike other task chairs, it does not require multiple components or complex assembly.

Coza combines a pivot point and flexible Polymer shell to mimic a traditional 2:1 synchronised mechanism and deliver improved levels of support, without the need for user adjustment. As well as facilitating flexible working practices, it meets the demand for more sophisticated meeting chairs to accommodate longer meetings.

Coza comes in black and white as standard, but can also be supplied in a wide array of bespoke colours, providing a stunning aesthetic and an inspiring alternative to the current market offer. The seat can be upholstered in any fabric and can be supplied on a choice of four or five star bases. All models come with castors or glides.

Commenting on this latest design, Mark Barrell, Design Director at The Boss Design Group, said: "Coza is an engineering triumph and shatters the market's preconceived expectations about what a task chair should be. It is designed for flexibility and ease of use, offering comprehensive support through fluid movement. Martin Ballendat has achieved a perfect harmony of simplicity, quality and comfort."
