

Kimberly Matenchuk Joins Clavister Board of Directors

Kimberly Matenchuk, a seasoned high level manager with years of service at Google and GE Digital, brings her talents and knowledge to Clavister's Board of Directors.

Örnsköldsvik, Sweden, May 15, 2019. Clavister, a leader in high-performance cybersecurity solutions, is pleased to welcome Kimberly Matenchuk to the Clavister Board of Directors. Her experience, especially in software sales solutions and in her broad understanding of the technology sector, will have a positive and strong impact on the board, management team and the company's strategic direction. "Kimberly is an excellent addition to our board," notes John Vestberg, president and CEO of Clavister. "Her sales and Go-To-Market knowledge will be an excellent complement to our other board members' strengths and we're looking forward to her contributions."

Matenchuk is presently the Senior Director of Sales for General Electric Digital (GED), a listed firm on the NYSE that develops and implements transformative digital infrastructure for large clients. She also possesses 15 years experience in global and digital software sales (including ten years at Google), developing and executing Go-To-Market strategies, delivering compelling new global partnerships as well as leading enterprise sales teams across Europe. She holds an Executive MBA from Cambridge and a BCom degree from the University of Alberta and presently resides in London.

"Joining the Clavister board is a terrific opportunity to be at the heart of a hungry, European software company that has impressive potential. I'm looking forward to the challenge and to bringing value to the company," Matenchuk states.
