

Clavister Welcomes New Board Member Martin Kreuzer

Ömsköldsvik, Sweden, May 28, 2020. Clavister, a leader in high-performance cybersecurity solutions, welcomes Munich based Martin Kreuzer to its Board of Directors, an expert in cyber security risk and technology. "Martin is a great addition to our board and is another step in the professionalizing of it, especially in relation to tech industry insights and public sector negotiating and knowledge," says John Vestberg, President and CEO of Clavister of the appointment. "His joining our team is a fantastic development."

Kreuzer has a degree in law and administrative science from the German Federal University for Applied Administrative Sciences and Law as well as fifteen years of experience from intelligence work and information security matters. He's served as a Civil Servant at German intelligence services—amongst others in the field of counter-economic espionage and counter cyber warfare. He's currently a Risk Manager for Cyber Risks in Cyber Insurance at Munich Re.

"Having a background in cyber risk and all the connected parts of that business—the marketing and sales as well as the understanding of the business operating terrain—gives me the possibility to bring this knowledge to Clavister. I'm excited to take on this challenge with Clavister and give it my focus; I'm convinced it will be a very dynamic and productive journey."
