

Advenica becomes integration partner to Axis Communications

Advenica, the Swedish supplier of cybersecurity solutions, has started a cooperation with Axis Communications and has now enrolled as an Axis Communications technology integration partner.

Surveillance Networks always have high security requirements and therefore are more often than not closed off from any outside connections. Advenica aims at providing integrated, high assurance, state of the art Cross Domain Solutions (CDS) on the edge of surveillance networks. The goal is to provide the best available protection against malicious attacks, or zero-day vulnerability exploits on the secured networks and still enable maintenance, monitoring, and updates on all devices in use.

As an Axis Communications technology integration partner Advenica will have access to tools and information that will make it possible to develop bespoke security solutions for surveillance network customers providing the highest possible level of cybersecurity on the market today.

We are always looking for new areas, where our experience and solutions can bring the highest level of protection to high security networks and we are very excited to start this new relationship with Axis Communications.
