

Advenica wins order worth 2,6 MSEK from an existing defence customer

Advenica has won an order on data diodes from a defence customer in Northern Europe worth 2,6MSEK.

Advenica has served national security for decades. For our defence customers we specialise in high-assurance data protection for critical communications, including those classified up to top-secret classification. Our extensive experience in defence has taught us not only to deliver cutting-edge cybersecurity solutions but also to ensure a seamless and reliable experience every step of the way.

Data diodes are essential for ensuring one-way data transfer between the most critical systems. Advenica's hardware-based data diodes meet the demands of customers with the highest security requirements – those who protect people and nations.

Advenica has received an order from an existing defence customer in Northern Europe on data diodes. The order will be delivered immediately.

We are proud of the renewed trust. When it comes to protecting critical national information, our government clients choose not just technology – they choose a partner who understands their needs and delivers with precision and dedication.
