

Crunchfish releases animated video showcasing resilient Digital Cash offline payment

Crunchfish releases an animated video that illustrates why resilience is essential in digital payment systems and how Crunchfish's Digital Cash layer-2 solution addresses this need.

Current payment infrastructures are designed for the “happy flow” — they work only when everything works. In a world increasingly exposed to uncertainty, outages, and disruptions, such infrastructure is insufficient for a critical public good like digital payments. Crunchfish's technology ensures payments work online, offline, and with cash, even when the payment network fail.

The video explains how Crunchfish adds a Layer-2 solution on top of any existing payment rail. This enables payment networks to receive resilient transactions, while users equipped with secure wallets makes payments that can be validated instantly, even without network connectivity and during backend outages. Using Crunchfish's patented Reserve-Pay-Settle approach, cryptographically signed digital IOUs are validated immediately and settled once the underlying payment system becomes available again.

*“Explaining our solution visually helps payment networks, payment service providers, and other stakeholders to understand how Crunchfish is rethinking payments. We are delivering resilience, interoperability, and privacy for any payment ecosystem in a secure, scalable, and surprisingly cost-effective way.”, says Joachim Samuelsson, Crunchfish's CEO.
