

Safeture launches partnership with global risk and security company in Australia

The SaaS company Safeture AB in Lund, Sweden, has launched a collaboration with the global risk and security company G|24 in Australia. The partnership means that Safeture has been commissioned to develop an integrated platform for risk mitigation and incident management, Global Alert by Safeture, for G|24.

G|24 CEO Brett Wheatley says, "Our years of experience in the people risk management industry placed us in a unique position to know exactly what we needed from the technology, and a partnership with Safeture® allows us to offer a premium personnel safety platform as standard to our clients. By offering the entire suite of modules, the platform provides us with the perfect tool to deliver our end-to-end advisory and incident response solutions".

The first signed customer is one of Australia's most prominent universities, which can now take advantage of Safeture's platform for its risk management.

"With the combination of our medical and security expertise, and Safeture's development capabilities, the potential to innovate in this space is one of the more exciting opportunities we have to truly disrupt the industry while providing best-in-class protection for organizations and their personnel," says Julian Heath, Managing Director at G|24.

"The agreement with G|24, a reputable expert within Risk & Crisis Management Solutions, solidifies Safeture as a leading provider of digital services/solutions for employee safety. The new partnership gives access to the Australian market where we see enormous potential, and the collaboration has already started generating business", says Magnus Hultman, CEO at Safeture.
